Sept. 2, 1945 AMET Sept. 2, 1970 AN New Look on Life The D.R.V.N.

WITH the recovery of national independence following the sweeping August 1945 Revolution, Viet Nam like a chrysalis breaking its cocoon, rose from a long torpor. The beavy colonial and feudal fetters were shattered.

Every branch of activity: politi-cal, military, economic and cultural, openad its door to the creative labour popular is door to the creative labour from being people at long last free from which the company of the victories over the foreign aggressors and invigorated by radical social reforms, notably the establishment of new production relations, that is to any new relations between man

Two major imperialist powers — French colonialism and the USA — have vainly tried to check the march of the Vietnamese people; economy and culture have not ceased to forge ahead in the DRVN in spite ordeal of a long drawn-out

It is against this historical background that painting has gone through a new stage of development in Viet seeking a more or less lasting escape in opium or in adventures. For others, the reproduction of some stereotyped, easily saleable models, or the imitation of some masters of Western art represented the supreme purpose of art. Still others — and they could be counted on the fingers of a hand — managed somehow to produce a few original works. But on the whole, artistic creation in those times remained meagre, with-out vigour, without life, without originality.

THEN came the Revolution. Power ful gusts of fresh air shook and woke up the artistic circles. The painters, haversacks on their backs, went to live in the jungles or to take part in military assaults against enemy strongholds, slice by side with the combatants of the People's Army, lying in the same but, esting out of the same bowl and working in the same rice-fields with the peasants. They discovered with unending am-azement, after the exhausting climb of a steep slope, the sceneries and people of those regions where none of them had ever set foot or backs, went to live in the jungles or to

Life to them has taken on a mean

ing and grown richer with a new content with each passing moment. It has drawn them into its eddies and whirlwinds, elevated them and carries them away. None of them can indulge indefinitely in his intellectual speculations and dreams. For their part, the ordinary masses of the people, less advanced intellec-tually and professionally, have also discovered the necessity of art. From this necessity have sprung ideas and feelings of art, and the desire to enjoy painting. They ask the artists to give voice to their aspirations. Some of them set to paint. Here, art tries first of all to speak language of life.

the language of life.

Life captures the artists' attention. It overflows from all parts,
not the life of a few individuals, or a given class but that of an entire people. Painting fries to tell something, though not always succastil, but at least the artist no longer feels himself different from others, alone, not understood. He partakes of that life with all his mind and all his heart. He tries to grasp the meaning of that life which moves forward. Art is full of its subject. Subject and not object. That new life, ebullient, is full of themes, and the duty of art is just to see them, to sense their urgency, magnitude and depth. In that life, the future is as real as the present and realism in no way means simple reproduction of reality, but also transfiguration of all that is in gestation in the real, that is to say of all the hopes that fill the hearts of men.

The artist communes with all these hopes and his work is first of all a matter of the heart, of senti-ment. Here there is no such barrier of sensibility which in many coun-tries stands between the artist and his people. The Vietnamese artist and paopie. In a vietnamese artist ardently loves his motherland now "retrieved" and renovated. The lave for the country, the people and labour, the love for the human kind pervade all works. A great tenderness suffuses his strokes, whether it is the glow of sunlight bordering the werdure of a village or the gentle light that haloes the faces of children learning to read. Battle scenes, atrocious as they are, never bear the stigma of despair because at the end of the war and the sufferings which go with it, shines the light of independence and

Man remains the main subject. He is seen everywhere, man of all trades, of all social strata, all nationalities, growing crops, learning, making war, weaving, spinning and building. Even when he is not there in the flesh, when there is only a row of trees, a corner of the

In renovating himself, man sees things in a different light. It is always the same buffalo

It is always the same buffalo with its rancous breathing and its crescent horns, whose lumbering steps have for centuries set the rhythm to the country life. Yet this buffalo has become today, after this buffalo has become today, after the land reform, the personal property of the farmer that tends it. The same bamboo hedge girdles the village but what is taking place behind it? The "notables" of the past, with their endless carounds, village to the past, with their endless carounds, with the past of the past, with the past of the past of

The mutual affection between the and mutual affection between the liberated peasant and the buffalo that has found a true master, the morry bustling of the villages are so many other new things which are blossoming in the country and the hearts of men, all this evidently the nearts of men, an trus evidentity must be given form and life in painting. Nevertheless, while he has little trouble choosing his themes he still has a long way to go in the search of appropriate techniques.

THE symbols and decorative motifs of medieval art no longer suffice. Even the achievements of the tra-ditional popular art, however great their artistic value, remain handiworks incapable of reflecting life in works incapable of reflecting life in all its richness, especially in all its profoundness. It is safe to say that the Vietnamese artists, painting first of all with their hearts, have tried every technique, consciously or not. For the moment, technical research comes second, but this in-contestable weakness of the present Victnamese art may be a source of hidden riches in the future. Because no school of art nor master can have the presumption to impose formula on others, however elaborate they may be. Esch paints in his own way, sharing with others only the prime target of their art: to render life in all its richness and fullness. Only barred are the the juggleries of pure abstraction. This is a paint-ing with an open heart, without detour, easily accessible to all.

The Vietnamesse painters, involved with the rest of the people in a long and gruelling fight for national independence and socialism, have to wage in the artistic field a daily

One should not forget that all along One should not forget that all along the past twenty years they have had to work in difficult conditions. In the years 1945-1954, the artist carried in his rucksack just a few pencils, a note-book with which he jotted down a scenery or a personage, standing beside a treach, in the shade of a tree or during a hait. The studies of a tree or during a hait. The studies in talled in the free zone had very little equipment. US aggression has generated new and innumerable difficulties. Even in the few years of a comparative peace from 1955 to 1965, in a country still very poor which had moreover to devote his all to the building of a new economy, the means at the disposal of the painters were indifferent.

Victgamese painting, on the other hand-possesses a particular national unknown to the artists of other countries: lacquer. Handleraft lacquer is found in Inpan and China but lacquer painting which remains specifically Victnamese has not ceased to flourish in the last years thanks to a tircless perfecting of the thanks to a tricess persecting of the technique and a deepening of artistic expression. Lacquer gives a new dimension to colours, brings out joy in all its splendour, thickens darkness, and renders in a par-ticularly vivid manner evuberance and optimism. At present, Viet-namese painting can boast a wide range of lacquer paintings, unique in the world.

A new painting is shaping up in the history of Vietnamere art. Quite young, it is still groping for its way but already it has been firmly rooted in the national reality and is growing and maturing in spite of great material difficulties because it is supported by the march of an entire people and is striving to identify itself with it.

DRVN FOREIGN MINISTRY'S STATEMENT & STATEMENT ON US PILOTS CAPTURED IN NORTH VIET NAM

The spokesman of the Foreign Ministry of the DRVN made on Dec. 13, 1970 the following statement on the US pilots captured in North Vist

In line with the lenient and humane policy of the Government of the DRVN, all US pilots captured in North Viet Nam have been allowed to exchange letter-cards with, and to receive parcals from, their families. The latter have also been getting news from their next of kin.

The competent services of the Government of the DRVN have handed by request the list of all US pilots captured in North Vict Nam to a number of personalities of good-will in the United States and in other countries. The Government of the DRVN does not feel it incumbent on it to give it to the US Generament.

As is well known, the US Government has been aging in Viet Nam one of the most cruel wars of aggression in history. The US imperialists have dropped on North and South Viet Nam a tonnage of bombs several times bigger than the tonnage sed in all theatres of operations during World War II. In North Viet Nam, US air and naval craft attacked with the utmost savagery cities, towns, villages, hospitals, schools, dams, pagodas, churches, etc. In South Viet Nam, hundreds of B.52 hombers and thousands of aircraft of other types have been indiscriminately dumping bombs and toxic chemicals on extensive areas in the countryside and even in cities. Carrying out a "kill all, burn all and destroy all "policy, the US aggressive troops have managed women, children and old people and rated to the ground many villages, as typified by Son My, Ba Lang An, etc. The US Government has floated international law, disregarded morality and slighted human conscience. The monstrous crimes resulting from the US was of aggression against the Vietnamese people have aroused strong protests and stern condemnation from world public opinion.

The US pilots captured in North Viet Nam are men caught in the acts of crime against the Victnamese people. They come within the jurisdiction of the DRVN, an independent and sovereign country. In 1957, when adhering to the 1949 Geneva Convention relative to the treatment of prisoners of war, the DRVN made an explicit reservation on Article 85: "The DRVN declares that the prisoners of war prosecuted and condemned for war crimes or crimes against humanity, in accordance with the principles of the Nuremberg trial, shall not benefit by the provisions of this convention as stipulated by

However, the Government of the DRVN has been unswervingly pursuing a lenient and humane policy vis-a-vis the US pilots captured in North Viet Nam. They have been allowed to correspond with their families on a regular basis; they enjoy adequate conditions of existence : these wounded or sick have been given adequate medical care. A number of them have been released. On the other hand, the US troops and their agents in South Viet Nam have murdered or put to the most horrible torture Vietnamese patriotic fighters and civilians captured by them; they have instituted shocking ponitentiary regime as evidenced by "tiger cages" in the Poulo Condor (Con prison; the massacres of prisoners in Thu Duc, Tan Hiep, etc., have drawn angry protests from world and American public opinion

With regard to the settlement of the question of militarymen captured in the war, the Govern-ment of the DRVN has declared full support for the views of the Provisional Revolutionary Government of the RSVN as presented in the September 17, 1970 proposal which made clear that in case the US Government declared it would withdraw from South Viet Nam all its troops and those of the other foreign countries in the US camp by June 30, 1971, the parties would engage at once in discussions on the release of captured militarymen. It thus provides a good opportunity for the US Government to put an end to its criminal war of aggression in Viet Nam and to achieve an early settlement of the question of US militarymen captured in Viet Nam.

The humane policy toward captured US pilots and the sensible and reasonable views of the Government of the DRVN have enlisted widespread approval in the world. Yet for its part, the US Government has carried out very perfidious and wicked manusers. It has made every attempt to misrepresent the above-mentioned policy of the DRVN Government, it has made hypocritical professions of "humanitarianism," in the "pris-oners-of-war issue," etc. It has been using this to cover up its odious crimes against the Victnamese people, to conceal its war acts against the DRVN, to justify prolonged US military occupa-tion of South Viet Nam, and to camouflage its schemes to extend the war of aggression. The US threat to attack detention camps and take away captured US pilots has further revealed the frantic and rockless nature of the Nixon administration The US imperialists must bear full responsibility for any adventurous act of theirs. In response to the Appeal of the Central Committee of the Viet Nam Workers' Party and the Government of the DRVN dated Dec. 10, 1970, the Victnamese people are determined to duly punish any inconsiderate encroachment by the US imperialists on their sacred national rights.

So long as the United States refuses to bring its war of aggression to a close, more Americans and more Vietnamese are to be killed or captured and the crimes of the US aggressors will pile up. The pertinacity of the US Government in prolonging and expanding its war of aggression has given further lie to its pious protestation of "human-

Hoang Minh Giam, Chairman of the Viet Nam Committee of Solidarity with the American People, recently sent Christmas greetings to peace-loving Americans.

"I want to particularly convey my best wishes," he said, "to all American fighters for peace and democracy who for the time being are still jailed or prosecuted by the US administration. This Christmas is the second since Nixon took office in the White House, but hundreds of thousands of GIs still have a hard time in the jungles of Viet Nam, a tropical land far from their home."

"The difference between this Christmas and the previous one is that the Nixon administration has extended the war to the whole of the Indo-thinese peninsula and that it is devising new escalations," Mr Hoang Minh Giam remarked. He also called on the American people to co-ordinate their efforts with those of the Vietnamese so as force the Nixon authorities to halt the war and repatriate landed in Saigon late in June 1961 owing to the inadvertence of a Diem's policeman when the Viet Nam which was carrying me from China, where I had lived from China, where I had lived for several years, to Italy, called at Saigon for three days. The cop who checked the passports did not pay any attention to where I came from, so I was able to mingle with the crowd after being authorized like the other passengers to visit the city as tourists.

Immediately after landing, I strolled about in downtown Saigon, and was struck by a thing. Two years earlier, in an interview granted to me in Hanoi, President Ho Chi Minh, granted to me in hands, president He Chi Minh, president He Minh, president was the same themes, the same arguments, the same arguments, the same gimmicks as I had seen under the Italian fascist regime. Together with other passengers, I rode in a bus to see what the guide-s young student speaking English and French-described to us "the most important monuments in the capicity." The vehicle satopped in front of first "monument," and guide said: "Ladies gentlemen, this is the US embessy." We burst out laughing the monument was laughing, the monument was not a ripping one indeed. A few minutes later the bus atopped along a wharf and the guide pointed his linger. I have been presented to fight own with the said "have been presented by the US to our President to fight communism." The third "monument" was a block of buildings going up which. "will be the blinter when the presented the presented of the pr of Americans who are on their way," he commented.

Either our guide was a propagandist for the Diem regime then a very stupid regime then a very stupid one, or he was one of 'ours' who was so intelli-gent as to make use of the heans put at his disposal by the regime against the regime and the Americans. In both cases, it was obvious that the Diem rule had nothing to ripice at. The National Liberation Front had just been set up a few months earlier and Saigon months carlier and Salgon papers were speaking every-day of the armed and political strange stubbornly waged in the provinces. At that time, I learnt from the press of the prosence of a certain professor. Eugene Staley, coming to lick indo shape a "pacification" plan. He was expected after this visit to set on foot the so-called "Staley - Taylor plan" to "pacify" Viet Nam in eighteen months. The eventual outcome was known to everybody At that time. US away over the Diem regime was already total, but the Amerarready total, out the Americans did not appear frequently in public; they rather preferred to work behind the scenes. However I had an interesting experience. Before landing, I had been warned: "Wear neither jacket nor neck-tie. The American are dressed like American are dressed like that and they are in bad odour here." I did not heed the advice. The result was that I was hustled on the idewalks, ill-treated in the restaurant and stared at with little sympathy; I came immediately to the conclu-sion that the Americans had not an easy life here. However, Johnson, then Vice-President of the United States, who had visited Saigon a month earlier, declared he had never met with a heattle look. His political myopy was to cost him dear.

TWO years later, I came back to Hanoi to attend back to Hassis it a steem back to Hassis it a steem an anti-imperialist conference of the Hassis it a steem of the Hassis it as the Hassis it

I returned to Viet Nam I returned to Viet Nam in 1965, at the early stage of escalation. I was there again in 1990 for a longer tay and this time had the possibility to see South Viet Nam... from the northern bank of the Ben Hai river (*), where the powers after the nearly ten years after the foundation of the National Front for Liberation and after the flops of the special war whose beginning I had got a glimpse of in Saigon, of the local war waged by over half a million US troops and the air war of destruction in the North, what one saw was the very picture of that reality. North of the Ben Hai river, blue amoke smudged the sky; the peasants were burning wede, or tilling their fields up to the bank of the Ben Hai. South of that river, there was smoke too, but the smoke of explosions of bombs from American planes distinctly seen the ones after the others. The colour of the smoke was not blue but reddish and blackish, the colours of destruction. No farmer working, but a scorched soil lying fallow, a rusty American landing craft destroyed by the liberation forces on the sandbank, a desert where napalm was being used to suppress what remained of the invole remained of the jungle. Neither puppet nor US troops were in sight: they were digging in their posts one could spot some kilometres off by a watch-tower, or occupying denuded hill tops. These were the very image of isolation into which the people's war had driven them, islets protected by camp, where Diem's men had carried out a massacre which shocked the conscience of the world. The fact that their morale and determination to fight remained intact tion to fight remained intact despite the sufferings endur-ed, but into the say that with people of that stamp, their struggle, however hard and figure it might be, could end only in victory. I met other victims of Diem-US repres-sion and, of lats, combatants victims of Diem-US repres-sion and, of late, combatants jailed for long years in Powlo Condor's tiger cages. I in-quired from one of them how they had been able to survive such horrors. The answer which I had anticipat-ed was not late in coming: "You see we have never ceased fighting and never yielded to the enemy, so we have been able to survive and to resume our combat positions in the struggle."

How simple and natural! Though frail and weak, man is stronger than these B-52s which wake me up in my nights at Vinh Linh by the drone of their jet engines and the explosion of a dozen

B-S2 indiscriminate night bombings: From the northern bank of the Ben Hai, one could see, after nightfall, true fireworks and flares released from enemy posts and hear explosions of handgrenades and shells the clatter of machine gire of liberation armymen and the liberation armymen enemy return fire. I learnt later from Liberation Radio that that night the enemy had licked the dust at the hands of the liberation formum, as if nothing happened.

On the northern bank of the Ben Hai river, I sensed almost in my flesh the significance of the long years of fighting of the Victamuses people. It was also a vision of the defeat indicated on the sense by inflicted on the enemy by a people who, for four years, had stubbornly fought back the attacks of thousands of the attacks of thousands of warplanes and the Seventh Fleet and compelled them to give up their aggression. The sporadic violations of North Vist Nam's skies only corroborated that fact. If I looked towards the South. If looked towards the South, saw the prospect of a victory won after a greelling and heroic exertion the outcome of which was left in no doubt.

This certainty, I may say, This certainty, I may any I had felt it from the very beginning. When I first visited the socialist North in 1959, I met women who had Phu Loi concentration Along Hanoi, other scenes were un-Hanoi, other scenes were un-folding before me like a long film: old men fishing in a pool dug by big American bombs, or women washing linen in a CBU container, workers in their workshops evacuated into caves, etc. A ten-year-old child selling tea on the road told me he was on the roan told me he was looking forward to becoming a soldier and fighting the Yanks should they be still here. As I objected that no Americans were to be sen about, he said: "We can detect their wherever they hide."

THE distance of over ten thousand kilometres from Viet Nam to Italy can be covered in two days by plane, fliteen days by rail plane, fifteen days by rail, over one month by sea. But over one month by sos. But there are things for which that distance does not exist and which remain in the bearts and minds of the people. The US presidents realized it.
